Saudi Arabia's risky succession

Is the Fed bad for productivity?

Hong Kong: 20 years of coping with China

Fire-proofing tower blocks

Modi's India

The illusion of reform

India Narendra Modi is not as much of a reformer as he seems: leader, page 9. As prime minister, he has done a decent job administering the Indian economy but not enough to reform it, page 18. India's normally raucous democracy is becoming more subdued, page 21. The billion-dollar meat industry is in limbo, page 54

Saudi Arabia The new crown prince should curb his impetuosity abroad and pursue reform at home: leader, page 11. King Salman's choice of a new successor was both shocking and predictable, page 38. The world's biggest oil company cannot be seen in isolation from the kingdom that it bankrolls, page 52

Health care For Senate Republicans to rush through a sweeping health-care reform without scrutiny would be reckless and undemocratic: leader, page 10

Hungary When a country's prime minister erodes democracy, Europe should punish him: leader, page 12. Inspired by Emmanuel Macron, a new party challenges Viktor Orban, page 42

Hong Kong Since its return to China 20 years ago this week, the territory has seen its economy go sideways. Blame politics, page 25. Now that Chinese stocks and bonds have been included in global indices, investors will have to buy them, page 59

Tower blocks and fires As the planet urbanises, life in tall buildings is becoming more common. It need not be dangerous, pages 50. A horrific fire in London raises more questions for Theresa May's embattled government: leader, page 10. Anger grows over a catastrophe and the government's slow response, page 47

Fund managers Why they do not perform consistently: Buttonwood, page 61. Reports of the death of conventional asset management are greatly exaggerated: Schumpeter, page 58
